Dear Gary:

Thanks for your April 25th letter, which we received on May 3. By now you should have received the taco documents. Hopefully, the stress they caused will be relieved.

Do not "put a knife" to the staff. That won't do you, or us, any good. I understand your frustration, but we're working on the retaliation issue and would ask that you leave it in our hands.

Thanks for keeping us posted. Please continue to do so.

Yours very truly

Ed Aro

In an effort to boost sales after a slow year, Taco Bell is unveiling the Doritos Locos Taco. It's the standard beef taco with a shell made of—well, you can guess the second part. Now you can have all the guilt that comes with eating a fast-food taco with the bonus of cheesy-dust fingers.

Taco Bell + Doritos = success?

Introducing the Doritos Locos Taco, with a shell made from Doritos

By Bruce Horowitz
USA TODAY

IRVINE, Calif. — Taco Bell is about to rub salt — make that orange Doritos dust — into its own wounds. It may just be the cure.

Roughly one year after the sky almost fell in on Taco Bell — amid a since-withdrawn lawsuit that falsely accused the nation's largest Mexican fast-food chain of stuffing its beef with filler — the brand is going on an offensive to turn its 50th anniversary year into one for the fast-food record books.

USA TODAY was the first media brought inside Taco Bell headquarters and into its secretive test kitchen to observe and taste the breadth of the brand's attempt at self-reinvention. Among the highlights: a slew of new products, including a Chiptole-like Cantina Bell platform; a new breakfast roll-out; a new slogan and brand campaign; and one ultra-simple but culturally cool concept that could finally revive the brand: a line of Doritos Locos Tacos with shells made entirely from — you guessed it — Doritos. Get ready to rock Doritos-heads. You'll soon be able to turn your tongue, fingers and hoodie strings orange by eating at Taco Bell. The national rollout is on March 8, but the buzz has been building for months. A clock on Taco Bell's website is counting down the seconds until launch date of the product that, it brags, has "Taco Bell on the inside and Doritos on the outside."

After tough times, Taco Bell counts on big turnaround

COVER STORY Wounded brands such as Taco Bell can take years to recover. What the 5,600-unit fast-food behemoth is about to try is almost unprecedented. It's making next to no major changes at the same time that around of the past decade, this could rank as one of fast food's most complex turnaround attempts in decades. Its likelihood of success — or failure — rests on the head of a Doritos chip.

Two commonly ridiculed "junk" foods — the Doritos chip and the Taco Bell taco — are being rolled into one. In this case, one plus one might not equal two. For Taco Bell, it may equal millions of dollars in incremental sales. The year has hardly begun, but there's already industry chatter about the Doritos-taco, emerging as one of the nation's top new products this year.

Take it from new-products guru Lynn Dornbier. As director of innovation and insight at research firm Mintel, she sees tens of thousands of new products every year. But this new taco, she says, will be "one of the big successes of 2012." She calls the link-up of the snack-food and fast-food giants "a marriage made in belly-busting heaven. Sav- ing to social media, Taco Bell is even hosting a "tweeter off" to determine one town that gets the new tacos delivered ahead of the curve.

Never mind that it's taking place at a chain coming off a lousy year when same-store sales fell 2% after the lawsuit. Taco Bell could have a McDonald's-like year, says David Palmer, industry analyst at UBS Investment Bank. That's the same McDonald's that's been punning the rest of the fast-food industry with growth throughout the economic downturn.

This would be huge about-face for the chain, whose parent, Yum Brands, also owns Pizza Hut and KFC. Taco Bell, whose sales topped $7 billion last year, sees 35 million customers walk in or drive up every week. It's the nation's sixth-largest fast-food chain, ranking just behind Wendy's in domestic sales, says research firm Technomic.

Not everyone, however, is jumping on the Taco Bell rebound bandwagon. "Unemployment remains their challenge," says Steve West, restaurant analyst at ITC Investment Research. No matter how many new products Taco Bell rolls out, he says, as long as unemployment is above 8% — particularly affecting the brand's target 18-to-34-year-old demographic — the chain will struggle.

Don't tell that to Taco Bell CEO Greg Creed, whose 11-year stint has been marked by a series

On drawing board: Taco Bell CEO Greg Creed dines with chef Lorena Garcia. The company recruited Garcia to help develop Cantina Bell, a line of upscale foods made with more natural ingredients.

Rolling out Doritos tacos. Two years ago amid softening taco sales, Taco Bell approached partner Frito-Lay about helping it reinvent the taco. Frito-Lay had previously helped it develop the top-selling Beesy Crunch Burrito, stuffed with spicy Fritos. When the snack-maker came back with the Doritos Locos Taco, it was a up-brainer. Creed says, "It was so simple. So obvious."

Especially to Frito-Lay. Doritos is the nation's No. 2 snack brand, second only to sister brand Lay's. Frito-Lay's chief marketing officer, Ann Mulder, is ecstatic about the link-up — and the buzz. Eat a Doritos Locos Taco, she jokes, and you get a Doritos fix. "Then a couple of hours later, she says, 'You're gonna want a bag of Doritos.' It didn't happen overnight. New machinery had to be added in four Frito-Lay plants to create hundreds of millions of new shells. A special cardboard 'holer' was created for the taco, so customers' hands aren't coated with the familiar orange Doritos cheese dust.

Test-market results around Toledo, Ohio, San Bernardino and Bakersfield have been outside the new tacos — an enormous number for a new product. In northwest Ohio, where 14 stores are selling the new tacos, sales of Doritos Locos Tacos outnumber conventional tacos, says franchisee Don Unruh. "It's been huge," he says.

Customers keep asking if they can buy the Doritos shells and bring them home. He's refused. One commercial airing in test markets features the true tale of 25-year-old customer Nat Christia, who drove from Clifton Park, N.Y., to Toledo, Ohio, to try one. There are plans to extend the line to Cool Ranch — and ultimately even to the current 123 Doritos flavors worldwide. In Henry, Scrieiber, a handyman from Laguna Hills, Calif., purchased a Doritos Locos Taco at a Taco Bell in Lake Forest, Calif., that was test-marketing them only for the day. "I know it's kind of a gimmick," says Scrieiber. "But I happen to like Doritos." He was so excited to eat the new taco, he concedes, "I even forgot to put on hot sauce."

Plopping breakfast inside burritos. Taco Bell has tried and failed at breakfast three times. This time will be different, insists Liz Matthews, senior director of food and beverage. Because the chain has learned that most consumers prefer more traditional American breakfasts. "They don't want jalapenos in the morning," she says.

That's why 800 West Coast locations are selling breakfasts that have only a slight Taco Bell twist. Instead of serving eggs and sausage on English muffins, they're rolling them into burritos. And they're selling round, pop-able, cinnamon-coated donuts that have the icing melted on the inside.

The chain plans to slowly roll out breakfast nationally in the next two years. Creed says. But the hours are engaged at teens not hourly workers, so don't look for 6 a.m. breakfast. At Taco Bell, it's served at a more civilized 8 to 11 a.m.

Already on board as a regular is Edward Eisenhauser, a CPA from Lake Forest, Calif., who stopped at Taco Bell on his daily drive into Los Angeles. "It's convenient," he says holding a customized burrito in one hand. "Eating in the car only saves a few minutes, but it seems like it saves you an hour."

Selling Chipotle-like grub. Following Chipotle's success, Taco Bell is testing a Cantina Bell line of more upscale foods made with more natural ingredients in Louisville and Bakersfield. If it's a hit, it will likely roll out nationally in 2013. Taco Bell enlisted celebrity chef Lorena Garcia to help create the line, with entrees priced a few bucks below Chipotle.

She concedes, "It was surprising for me to hear from Taco Bell." Her goal with the Cantina Bell line: "Keep it simple." Among the items: all-whites-meat chicken marinated in a cilantro dressing, grilled corn salsa and black beans. "This will change the perception of what you can get at Taco Bell," Creed says.

Creating a slogan — with attitude. So long "Think outside the bun." That's being nixed for a more lifestyle-targeted slogan: "Live Más" (Live More in Spanish).

The idea is to replace the concept of "food as fuel" with "food as lifestyle," says marketing chief Brian Nicco. The very brand that once advised consumers to "Push for the border" and later enlisted a feisty Chinuhua to utter, "Yo quiero Taco Bell," is now advising folks to "Live Más."

"Which is exactly what Jose Acosta, a 12-year-old something sign installer from Fountain Valley, Calif., did while on a work break with some buddies. He sat down with a tray-load of food that he bought for less than $5: a burrito, a bag of Doritos, a soft drink — and a Doritos Locos Taco, which he eats with gusto. "That's good," he says. "I'm hungry." "I don't bother Acosta, he says as he prepares to inhale the second half of his Doritos Locos Taco, then stops, smirks and offers one final thought: "Hey, at least it's got lettuce."

A copy of this letter is being sent to you two (2) and The United States Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, And The Federal Bureau of Investigation

We The Inmates here At The United States Federal Penitentiary Florence-Super-Max., Request that your Office And Staffs of Congress, Send Some One to Investigate these Officers who was At the United State Federal Penitentiary across the street when the So-Call Gang-Cowboys was in Full Operation.

Who Train these Officers that have been sent over here at the Super-Max. These Officers call themselves the New Cowboys. The same type of Misconducts And Criminal Activities are going on here. This is what Tax-Payers dollars are going to, A Organize Corrupt Secret Covert Operation. You have white officers bring white Inmates Drugs And Knives

These Officers, Warden And Retaliate Against Inmates.
They are assaulting inmates, Putting unknown substance
In our food, Refusing to feed us, Denying our Medication
Denying us Copies, Legal Envelopes, Stamps Access to Legal Court Documents; Medical Treatment And Funds In my Inmate Trust Fund Account, our Legal And Social Mail.
I Am Requesting A Moratorium be Placed on this Prison And A Full Investigation.

What Will It Take for us Inmates to Get Someone to Investigate these Staffs? Do A Staff have to Die or be Killed or Inmates die or be killed?
Some Inmates die so scared for their life Its sad.
I do Not, I told the Warden, My Attorney And Director and All, that I only have 30 Months left on my Time, but if one of these white racist ass officers put hands on me or do me any harm. I Am going to put A Knife In his Heart. If you two (D) wish not to take Action or Investigate this stuff. Send it to the Appropriate Authority who will.

This issue is Not going away I have filed A Writ of Mandamus In Washington, D.C., Court of Appeals Letting them know what is going on.

Get A Copy of the Law suit my Attorney
just filed against the Prison. This shit is sickening.

Thank You.

To, Whom It May Concern.

We the Federal Prisoners At U.S.P. Florence A.D. 2
Super Max, are very tired of these white racist ass staffs, who now call themselves the New Cowboys.

The Change that these Lt., S. I. S. Lt.,
Captain, Associate Warden, Unit Managers, Counselors,
Officers and Medical Staffs and Staff Attorneys,
And Mail Room Staffs, No And Get Away with It.
Its No Checks and Balances or Supervisors or No one to Investigate these Peoples. The Government or Federal Government Refuse to Investigate Itself.
Even the Department of Justice, And the F.B.I.
and U.S. Attorneys Office. You have officers, Harassing, Retaliation against inmates, Faking and Stealing Inmates, Sexes and Social Mail, Medicines, Books, Photos, Legal Documents, Commissary Checks,

Refusing to accept Medical Treatment, Refusing me my Medication for my Stomach And High Blood Pressure Refusing to feed me, Refusing to Pick up my Legal and Social Mail, Taking and Removing Certified Slips
from Legal and Social Mail, Refusing Legal Documents from Legal Mail, Denying me Access to Boxes of Legal Documents in Storage to Access Attorneys and the Courts, Denying me Access to Copies, Stamps and Legal Envelopes, Putting me on Sub. there in our food
With no Police Incident Reports and getting away with it etc. Always these same Staff

I contacted R. Madison, P. Russell N. Lee, Sandusky, Catawba, S. etc. Walter, et al. A lot of other. You even have Calvert and Sandusky in some what relation with A Committee who is a What do it take for us to get someone to investigate this shit? Do we have to kill one of these officers? I only saw 3 months left and I do not mind killing one of these white fucks.
I have every right to protect myself when I am being abused and attacked by these Hell-bell New Cops.
I have written my Congressmen, Seniors, H. B. G. U. S. Attorneys Attorneys Your Department refuse to Act a report
one of these mother fuckers will die. I will Abuse
you and I will have nothing to do with it.
The And Butlers are tired of these racist mother
fuckers.
